GHG emissions from urban wetland under changing water level conditions

Lisa Drechsler, Kamal Zurba and Jörg Matschullat

Results

Our results show that the former minor CO₂ sink became a source, and the emissions of CH₄ and N₂O increased rather drastic, too.

Conclusion

Under conditions of climate change with increasing drought period in many regions, this observed effect may enhance the feedback and increase atmospheric GHG concentrations.