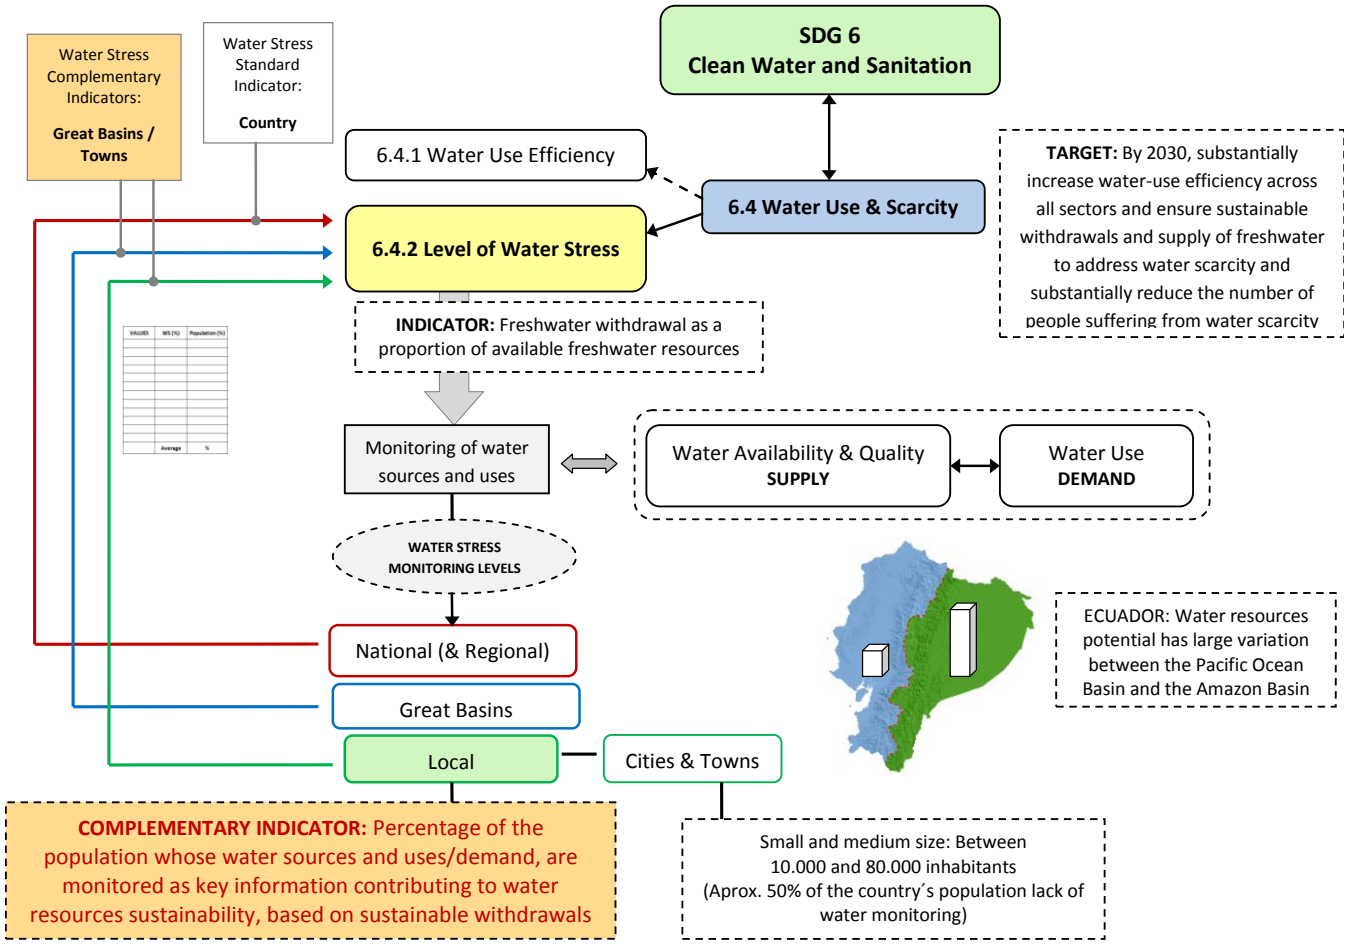
Monitoring water availability by a multi level model to address water scarcity

By Homero Castanier


The model contributes to assure the information on actual water availability for the population to control water stress at all levels, from local to subnational or great basins, to national and regional levels.