

The direct effect of submarine groundwater discharge on the concentration of dissolved oxygen in estuarine and coastal waters

References

Moore, W.S. and Joye, S.B. (2021). Saltwater Intrusion and Submarine Groundwater Discharge: Acceleration of Biogeochemical Reactions in Changing Coastal Aquifers. Front. Earth Sci. 9:600710. doi: 10.3389/feart.2021.600710

Moore, Willard S., Vincent, Jacob, Pickney, James L., Wilson, Alicia M. (2022). Predicted Episode of Submarine Groundwater onto the South Carolina, USA, Continental Shelf and Its Effect on Dissolved Oxygen. Geophysical Research Letters, 49, e2022GL100438, doi/10.1029/2022GL100438.

Peterson, R.N., Moore, W.S.; Chappel, S.L., Viso, R.F., Libes, S.M., Peterson, L.E. (2016). A New Perspective on Coastal Hypoxia: The Role of Saline Groundwater. Marine Chemistry, 179, 1-11.

Sanial, Virginie, Moore, W.S., Shiller, Alan M. (2021). Does a bottom-up mechanism promote hypoxia in the Mississippi Bight? Marine Chemistry v235, doi.org/10.1016/j.marchem.2021.104007